

How to reopen an unemployment claim

Welcome! Before you proceed with the instructions for reopening a claim, read the below information to find out if you are reopening your claim at the right time. Unemployment law is specific about not filing claims early or late; it must be done during the correct week to help prevent claim delays and not miss any benefits. This process allows you to file a weekly claim the following Sunday, for the first week you are unemployed. You cannot reopen your claim and file a weekly cert in the same week.

Claims are always effective on Sundays

If you reopen your claim Monday-Saturday, the effective date is the preceding Sunday. If you reopen it on a Sunday, the effective date is the same day.

“Claims weeks” are always Sunday - Saturday

When the department asks questions about specific weeks, we are referring to what occurred from Sunday – Saturday. Your employer’s week-to-week schedule may be different, but you must provide us information for Sunday-Saturday for our purposes. The claim week ending date, or “CWE,” is always a Saturday.

A common error: reopening your claim a week too early or too late

You must reopen your unemployment claim during the first week when you are fully/partially unemployed and file a new claim once your current claim expires, if you're still unemployed.

Sun	Mon	Tue	Wed	Thur	Fri	Sat
	Worked	Worked	Worked	Worked	Worked-last day
Effective Date		File Reopen Application
File First Weekly Certification

EXAMPLE OF BEING TOO EARLY: You normally work Monday-Friday. You are told on Friday not to return to work next week. Do not reopen your claim when you get home. Wait until SUNDAY to open your claim. You have seven days – Sunday through Saturday – to submit your new claim.

Consequence: Filing early causes the effective date of your reopened claim to be the Sunday of the last week you worked, NOT the first week you were unemployed. This will cause a delay because staff will need to speak with you, and they must adjust the effective date of your reopened claim one week later.

EXAMPLE OF BEING TOO LATE: You go to work Tuesday and are told to go home; your services are no longer needed. You can reopen your claim right away, or any day through Saturday (four days later). DO NOT wait for Sunday.

Consequence: Filing late does not prevent you from requesting backdating. However, there is no guarantee the request will be granted. Your reason for filing late must be allowable according to PA regulations in order for you to be paid, so you may be denied benefits for weeks of unemployment that you missed.

The weekly certifications that you will file in order to receive payments have similar, strict deadlines when it comes to timing. The system will prevent you from filing weekly claims early. However, filing late means you run the same risk of benefits not being granted that week. See our File Weekly Certifications guide for steps on how to certify your weeks for claim weeks.
